2011 Julie Klauber Award

Deadline for nominations: January 28, 2011

Keystone wishes to recognize the support that volunteers and staff provide to their libraries. We do so annually with the Julie Klauber Award.

Who was Julie Klauber?

Julie Klauber was a national expert and leader on disability issues and was instrumental in helping develop Keystone's growing national presence. In 2002, Julie received the ASCLA Francis Joseph Campbell Award recognizing her work advancing library services for the blind and physically handicapped.

Julie served as the director of Talking Books Plus library in Suffolk County, NY, and authored several articles on library resources and services for people with disabilities. Additionally, she created and maintained the newsletter, Disability Resources Monthly, and the corresponding website (www.disabilityresources.org). Julie passed away on September 3, 2002 after a long, brave struggle with cancer.

Who can be nominated?

We recognize the support that volunteers and staff provide to their libraries each year with the Julie Klauber Award. Each library may nominate one staff member or volunteer who works with KLAS in their daily job functions, has shown outstanding service to their library and the community in the spirit of Julie Klauber during his/her time with the library, and will appreciate and benefit from attending the KLAS Users' Conference. Go to the Julie Klauber Award article posted on http://www.klasusers.com/uc2011 to nominate someone.

What does the recipient receive?

The Julie Klauber Award Recipient will receive a trip to the 2011 KLAS Users' Conference in Raleigh, NC, April 14-14, 2010.

Please see the please the Julie Klauber Award article published on http://www.klasusers.com/uc2011 for further details.
